CONFERENCE SITE

The J. Erik Jonsson Central Library opened in 1982 at 1515 Young Street, across from City Hall. It is Dallas's third central library since the opening of the original Carnegie Library at the corner of Commerce and Harwood streets in 1901. The conference will be held on the recently renovated 7th floor, which houses its extensive collection of research materials related to Dallas and Texas history as well as its Fine Books Collection. The floor boasts new meeting rooms with state-of-the-art audiovisual capabilities, expanded exhibit spaces for Fine Books and Texana, increased capacity for materials storage with compact shelving, a Digital Interactive Gallery (DIG) to share content in a fun and innovative way, and much more. Parking is available in the underground garage located on Wood Street, which is one-way eastbound behind the library, as well as in several area surface lots
