Instructor: Jessica Allen

This three-part series provides reluctant parents, grandparents, and home or professional educators with the tools they need to provide children with inexpensive and refreshingly un-scientific, child-led nature study lessons. Jessica begins this three-part workshop by encouraging an informal discussion about "nature study." A packet of materials (book lists, guides, catalogs, etc.) will be provided.

During the second part of the workshop she will discuss: easy-to-implement nature study research methods, opportunities that allow families to engage in citizen science and most importantly, how to encourage children to authentically recognize and value the concept of conservation. She will also share methods and best practices for collecting and studying local flora & fauna. Finally, the class will enjoy a short walk together.

Fee: $75 for all three 1 1/2-hour classes

Processing Your Images Class - Saturday, April 21, 2018 9:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.

Instructor: Bryson Leidich

Looking at the work of others can be instructional, but how do your images look to someone else?

This class will use your image captures as the instructional material. Each person will be asked to submit a minimum of three original raw captures for analysis.

From the submitted images Bryson will analyze and process your files using Lightroom or Adobe Camera Raw and follow through with enhancement in Photoshop. One image from each participant will be used and a second image if time permits. Watching someone else process your images can be an eye-opening experience as things you might not consider are looked at in detail.

Fee: $35 (please provide three or more images on a jump drive).

10:00 a.m. to 12 noon

An understanding of basic layers and masks is recommended but the process of using layers and masks will be expanded upon. Subject matter will include: Refined Selections and Masking, Applying Image techniques for masking, Selected sharpening techniques, Understanding Curves Luminosity and Color Contrasting Blend Modes, BlendIf for control of highlight and shadows and Color Grading.

Better image making is not a matter of a better camera, it is a matter of better post processing technique. The goal is to make the images look like you want them to look, not what the camera thought they should look like. Fee: $45
