

Ellen's PICKS

A wealthy family has 2 children who disappear (many years apart) from their family-owned summer camp. Multi-generational mystery. Strong female characters.

Someone is targeting young girls in a small town in the south. An epic story starts and crosses decades involving true friendship, heroism, murder and hope.

A pretty darn good thriller - along the lines of Ware or Kubica. Not your typical set up. This one involves some spy games and we are never quite sure who is conning who! It kept me guessing all along. The wrap up was a little underwhelming, but overall a good book!

A sweet, heartwarming story of a lonely old man who finds his way to a small town where he believes he will soon die. However, he meets the unique townsfolk who show him the meaning of kindness.

Written before Covid, this book is part Rom-com and part Christmas movie. A middle aged British couple is welcoming their young adult children home for the holiday like none they have had before. They are forced to quarantine together because one of the daughters is just back from Africa dealing with a deadly viral outbreak. Each family member has a secret and being together may break them.
